The endless procession of yellow school buses depositing their drowsy cargoes at the doors of Woodson marked the beginning of the day. Immediately each Cavalier found himself in a whirl of activity, a pre-school pep rally or Student Government electioneering. After making a quick trip to his locker and dumping his books at his first-period room, he hurried off to make the most of the few minutes before class began. He met his friends, exchanged greetings and groans over an upcoming test, and perhaps fought his way to the cafeteria for a hasty second breakfast. However, when the 8:20 bell rang, he stopped whatever he was doing and hurried through the crowded halls to his first period class. His school day had begun.

The six-period day officially began at 8:25 a.m. for the 2800 Woodson students. Activities in the various classrooms brought life to the sprawling, two-story, brick building facing Little River Turnpike. A gym class attentively watched a gymnastic exhibition. Rodents scurried in the biology laboratory. Lights dimmed in the planetarium. In the cosmetology department girls applied newly learned techniques to fellow classmates. Fluent A.L.M. French flowed from tapes in the language laboratory. In physics, the principle of electromagnetic fields was explained in a P.S.S.C. film. Food odors permeated the cafeteria area, reminding students of the coming break for lunch and perhaps a chance to make that "important" phone call. But when that fifth period bell beckoned, a quick after-lunch nap was in order before the teacher started his classroom lecture.

When the academic day was over at 3:30, many students chose to remain on the grounds and devote their afternoon hours to a variety of physical activities. During fall, the football squads spent many hours drilling in preparation for the weekend clash. In winter, interests turned to gymnastics, modern dance, or other in-season sports. In preparation for the spring track season, Woodson athletes were seen running through deserted halls. When 5:00 p.m. arrived, late bus caravans carried exhausted but happy students home to a hot meal and rest.

Not even with late buses did the typical student end his day at Woodson. If he was lucky, he had a brief interlude at home before begging the car or his father's chauffeur services to return him to school night life. It might have been a play rehearsal in the auditorium; perhaps it was a spirited game on the field or in the gym; or maybe it was that long-awaited dance in a "transformed" cafeteria.

Sometimes not soon enough and sometimes too soon, the day drew to a close. From early September, 1964, until June, 1965, there were one hundred and eighty-five of these school days.

Administration

At the heart of the W. T. Woodson High School's philosophy is the determination to meet the educational needs of all its students in accordance with democratic principles. Such a philosophy necessitates developing an extensive student-oriented program which will guide with discipline and challenge with freedom. One of the major responsibilities of the administration in Woodson's third year of operation was the direction of a comprehensive evaluation of all aspects of this school program.

Though there were obvious divisions of responsibility, there was consistency and teamwork among Woodson's administrative leaders to insure an efficient and spirited atmosphere. Mr. Chesley's busy days were spent in overseeing the entire operation of Woodson's varied and ambitious curricular and extra-curricular programs. His activities, typical of those of his fellow administrators, included frequent conferring with teachers and students, visiting classes, conducting faculty meetings, and evolving plans for the future "Woodson Way."

Special Services

Everywhere within WTW's maze of classrooms, halls, and offices were reminders of innumerable "extras" which have become so much a part of the "Woodson Way." From the pride and patience with which Mr. Thompkins directed the "care-taking" of Virginia's largest school plant, to the care with which Mrs. Heglar managed the school finances, "service" was the keynote of a large staff of Woodson personnel.

One of the busiest "special service" centers was the main office. There Mrs. Hippler and Mrs. Rich could be found on any typical day engaged in answering incessantly ringing telephones, typing up administrative bulletins, preparing daily absentee lists, or patiently responding to a flood of teacher and student inquiries.

From time to time throughout the year, an unseen force, affectionately known as I.B.M., influenced the lives of students and teachers. Miss Laverne Carson directed "the machine's" activity as it spouted forth class lists, schedule cards, and grade reports.

Library and Guidance

Students enjoyed the library for both research and relaxation. Four thousand new books provided students with vast reference sources, and the librarians with a monumental cataloging job. Besides the attraction of new materials, the extended library day, 7:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., as well as special senior fourth period passes, served to encourage student reading. Teachers also enjoyed the library's expanded facilities, especially the visitor's study room and the special-subject reserve shelves.

While students probed the past in the library, guidance counsellors looked toward the future. They planned schedules, supervised testing, and discussed students' problems and plans. Sensing the urgency of frequent communication with all juniors and seniors, the Guidance Department initiated junior and senior guidance councils. Student representatives attended weekly meetings and reported all information to their respective classes. Meanwhile, counsellors maintained a steady schedule of individual conferences as well as many "behind-the-scenes" preparations of college recommendations and transcripts. Offering encouragement, information, and advice, they aided students from registration to graduation.

Echoing from the corridors of the past come voices of man searching for the meaning of his existence. Woodson students, in an effort to understand themselves and their present world, interpreted these voices through the disciplines of art, music, and literature. From the freedom of self-expression in an art class to the challenge and inspiration in any one of the bands or choirs, course offerings in the humanities implanted new ideas and concepts of beauty within the minds of willing students.

Characteristic of Woodson's correlated approach to the humanities was the Fine Arts Festival, sponsored jointly by the Art and Music Departments. The trend toward unifying the study of art, music, and literature was also evident in the English program, especially in two advanced senior classes and the new "American Ideas" course for juniors. In all three departments, instruction had one ultimate goal: to reveal how great men of other ages have expressed themselves, and to help students find and express themselves.

Languages, geography,

Stressing the importance of fluent conversation, the Foreign Languages Department continued its policy of speaking, reading, and writing. By studying the countries where their language is spoken, "culture day" students learned about customs and traditions. Students gained further insight into the interpretation of languages with the addition of Spanish exchange teacher Señor Antonio Fernandez and French teachers Miss Janice Sarno and Miss Shirley Holton.

Applying this same "further insight" theme, the Social Studies Department introduced a new concept for juniors. "American Ideas" combined English and history classes enabling students to acquire detailed understanding of American culture.

Through analysis and comprehension of world culture, these two departments fulfilled their purpose—preparing today's students for their roles as tomorrow's citizens.

To those who were willing to learn, the departments of mathematics and science at Woodson High School offered a curriculum and a way of learning essential for advance in an increasingly demanding world. Always the emphasis was on training the individual to think for himself and to relate his knowledge.

The Science Department, with a staff of twelve teachers, seven separate courses, and a total of fifty-one classes, stressed fewer lecture-dominated classes in preference to greater student activity in the classroom. Science students had a tremendous advantage in the well-equipped laboratories of Woodson. With such equipment as geiger counters, spectroscopes, kimosopes, and even physics "slinkies", classes were a continuous challenge. Also a source of pride in Woodson's science program was the planetarium, one of two now in use in Fairfax County.

In the Mathematics Department also, the variety of courses and the methods of learning reflected modern trends. Characteristic of the department's goal to meet the varied interests and needs of all the student body were the two new courses offered this year: Consumer Mathematics and Trigonometric Functions.

Bob Thompson and Cheryl Vetter watch the undulation of a "slinkie" while studying waves and energy in physics.

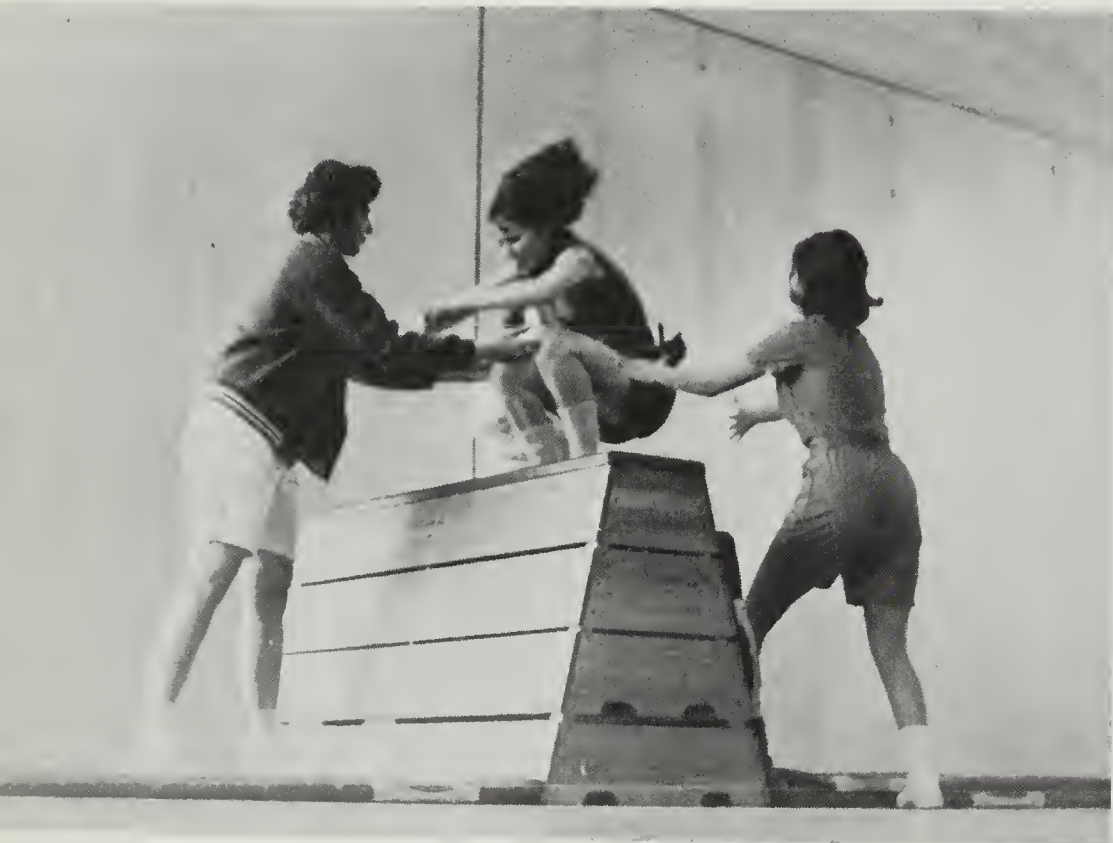

With courses varying from drivers' education and first aid in the freshman classes, to archery and golf in the senior classes, the Physical Education Department achieved a well-rounded schedule. Boys participated in gymnastics, track, and field events, while girls concentrated on modern dance and free exercise.

Sports including volleyball, basketball, soccer, and football helped to stimulate the efforts of students toward team cooperation, as well as to develop their physical stamina. While juniors and seniors stuck to their day-to-day gymnasium or outdoor routine, freshman and sophomore classes alternated three weeks of classroom health training with three weeks of physical education.

For the business-minded student, Woodson's curriculum afforded a variety of opportunities ranging from classroom instruction to on-the-job training. Besides courses in bookkeeping, shorthand, and typing, the Business Department offered training and practice in the operation of office machines.

The Distributive Education program involving about fifty Cavaliers, coordinated afternoon jobs with classroom instruction in all phases of retailing.

Another, school-community "Cooperative" venture, Industrial-Cooperative Training made it possible for interested students to spend four hours at school in regular academic work and four-to-six more hours learning and earning in industrial jobs like printing and building.

Special skills became

Opportunities for training in practical skills became increasingly abundant in Woodson's '64-'65 curriculum. Vocational classes provided instruction in such career fields as cosmetology, practical nursing, automotive mechanics, carpentry, electricity, drafting and design, air conditioning and refrigeration, and electronics. New to the program was a data processing course. In all, over two hundred students were engaged in these ten vocational courses which combined classroom, laboratory, and field trip learning.

Courses in the industrial arts were also designed for the career-minded, as well as for those students seeking to supplement other plans with basic skills in mechanical drawing, woodworking, or simple construction and repair, involving a wide variety of industrial materials now available.

Perhaps the most basic skills girls wish to acquire are those of a good homemaker. With the addition of a third teacher to the Home Economics Department, classes were extended to include almost 250 girls. From threading a needle to creating a new dress, from learning child care to perfecting culinary arts, future homemakers learned by reading, listening, and then "doing." Among the more exciting and challenging topics was interior decoration, a unit of study climaxed by a field trip to model homes in the area.

Cabinet secretaries

Working with both houses of Woodson's Congress were the officers, members of the Cabinet, and advisor, Mrs. French, who together carefully planned and smoothly executed Student Government projects. They led students in the three major S. G. activities: by selling subscriptions for the Magazine Drive, bringing donations for the Christmas boxes, and attending the Leadership Training Conference.

The Cabinet was responsible for many behind-the-scene activities. Among daily duties were raising the Flag, publishing "What Time Where" bulletin, and stamping all club and class posters with the "Approved by Student Government" stamp.

Dennis Carr, President; Karen Kilgore, Vice President; Joan Powell, Secretary; and Jim Parker, Treasurer, take a brief "time-out" from their busy schedules.

The Student Government office was the nucleus of a large and efficient organization. The House of Representatives, the larger branch of Woodson's bicameral Student Government, met weekly to communicate information to every first period class. Through the Representatives, classes were notified of such activities as yearbook pictures, general sessions, and club meeting dates. The Senate, composed of all club and class presidents and two Senators from every class, coordinated club and class activities. They also sponsored a "Courtesy Week" in December, emphasizing the "Woodson Way."

Marcia Sandrock, President of the NHS, begins the ceremony for the induction of new members.

NHS inspired character,

Character, Scholarship, Leadership, and Service are the four virtues which the members of the National Honor Society pledge to make the ideals of their school and of their lives. Woodson members were elected to the Society by a faculty committee which chose for membership only those people who excelled in each of the four cardinal principles. At two inductions during the year, old members welcomed new ones into the Society. Both the old and the new realized that being a member is a challenge as well as an honor.

Bringing the fine arts to Woodson was the main goal for this year's National Honor Society. It sponsored three performances of the National Symphony Orchestra, an appearance by the National Ballet, and two Shakespearean dramas presented by the Catholic University Players.

To continue upholding the principle of service, NHS members volunteered their services as tutors to the student body. They also held a book sale, affording Woodson's bookworms the double pleasure of saving money and acquiring their favorite books.

This year's Honor Society members, while individually active in many fields, worked together in a unified organization. In cooperation with their sponsors, Mrs. Margaret Ford, Mrs. Helen Miller, and Mr. Marvin-Joe Merck, they endeavored to maintain their standards of excellence in all activities.

The CAVALCADE familiarized students with

Tim Moore and Karyn Warfield, Fourth Page Editors.

The CAVALCADE embarked on its third year of publication with an entirely new staff of editors: editor-in-chief Steve Olin, copy editor Danny Verner, and second page editor Ben Johnston. These editors, with the aid of all the other staff members, made a successful attempt to improve the overall format of the paper. Pictures, story content, headlines, and general layout revealed the marked advance in quality.

Under the sponsorship of Miss Dorothy Spencer, the CAVALCADE capably fulfilled its function as the communications mainstay of The W. T. Woodson High School. It informed the student body of class and student government activities, sports events, and social affairs. The editorials familiarized students with various school issues, and the features acquainted them with items of humor and general interest. One of these features was the Amorphous Almanac, a collection of useless (but humorous) facts compiled by Steve Olin.

Once a month the bustling activity of the CAVALCADE office reached a climax as the devoted and hard-working staff strained to meet the printer's deadline. With the help of capable reporters, the staff put out eight editions plus a special Christmas insert and an end-of-school feature edition.

Led by Mr. Anthony DeBenedittis and co-editors Penny Olson and Phoebe Palmer, a group of thirty students set new precedents with their two 1964-1965 issues of the Woodson literary-art magazine. Beginning in the early fall, staff members evaluated students' endeavors in the fields of poetry, prose, art, and photography.

Obtaining original and imaginative ideas was the chief aim of the PAGE, and every issue testified to the magazine's success; each edition featured liveliness and thoughtfulness in both format and content. The spring issue included the second annual "PAGE awards" in the four fields. In addition, the double, forty-eight page issue was a challenge for the staff members who were encouraged to submit their own creations.

Mr. DeBenedittis, Page advisor, discusses the new format with co-editors Penny Olson and Phoebe Palmer.

The CAVALIER provided

In your hands is the result of the 1965 CAVALIER staff's teamwork. It is a journal of memories which comes as the culmination of a year of toil and talent. Miss Ida Mae Speeks, sponsor, guided and advised the yearbook staff with patience and skill. She provided the inspiration and spirit found within the CAVALIER.

Editor-in-chief Drew Upton, along with copy editor Gale Gibson, layout editor Dana Shreve, and photography editor MoDenna Ceconi, challenged and directed the enthusiasm and the efficiency of a large staff. Tedious planning and work kept twenty-five Cavaliers occupied during sixth period every day. Dreams became an easier reality, however, as faithful after-school assistants came time and again to type, reproduce layouts, and assist with other details.

There is no denying the headaches of meeting deadline after deadline; fitting headlines, cutlines, and body copy into layouts; or of acquiring "perfect" pictures for every page. Yet satisfactions far outweighed these frustrations, especially when June and two thousand yearbooks arrived. Then, as never before, each CAVALIER staff member felt a special sense of pride in his school and in his accomplishment.

Key and Keyette aided

Members of the W. T. Woodson High School Key Club strove to serve their school, and in serving, to promote fellowship among themselves and throughout the student body. After inducting eleven new members, they embarked upon a series of service projects, the first of which involved assembling the Student Directory. Another important, though unromantic, contribution to the school was the fifteen trash cans, purchased and painted by members for use on the athletic field. Again, they offered their services on College Night to park cars and eliminate traffic tie-ups.

One of their major achievements was an immense pep rally, called "Blue and White Night", staged in January to invigorate school spirit. This night of athletic exhibition and rousing cheers was climaxed by the presentation of the Sportsman's Code plaque to the student body.

In the spring, members and their sponsor, Mr. Charles Billak, attended a national Key Club convention in Washington, D.C.

school and community

In September the Keyette Club of eleven "old" members began its second active year with the induction of twenty-four new girls. Selected on the basis of leadership and character, these thirty-five girls rendered services which were recognized daily throughout the school and surrounding communities.

The club, with the help of the President, Judy Squires, and sponsor, Mrs. Priscilla Brown, offered assistance in the school store, the after-school library, the Fairfax TB Center, and the Falls Church Cerebral Palsy Center. The Christmas "Candy Cane Sale", "Safe-Driving Week", a spring "Daffodil Day", and a private bake sale for the teachers, were the paramount achievements of the club this year.

In March, the Keyettes attended the long awaited National Convention in Norfolk, Virginia. Business sessions, casual seminars, and informal teas were included in this exciting weekend.

Daily services were goals

The Cavalier Corps, originally organized as a branch of Student Government, evolved in the fall of '65 into a separate service and leadership organization. Under the sponsorship of Mr. Mason and Mr. Knupp, twenty boys volunteered to serve in a variety of sometimes thankless tasks.

Sporting the golden WTW emblems on blue cardigan sweaters, members of the Cavalier Corps were a familiar sight at midday in the cafeterias. They undertook such projects as monitoring in the school cafeterias during lunch and in the gymnasium during athletic events held at Woodson. Perhaps their chief contribution, however, was a somewhat intangible one: that of encouraging a responsible, positive attitude in all Cavaliers.

When questioned by the Cavalier Corps about her hall pass, the little girl said, "Who me?! I'm just visiting here, boys." Surrounding her are her father Mr. Knupp, Mike Weidner, Bob Gass, Bill Sears, and Jim Swan.

accomplished by the Tri-Hi-Y and Cavalier Corps

This year, Woodson's Tri-Hi-Y pursued its goal of creating, maintaining and extending fellowship in the school with an intensive program of club projects and activities. Members were occupied with everything from selling apples in the club's "Apple for the Teacher" campaign to scrubbing car windshields during the Safe Driving Week at Woodson.

Strength of character, and interest in public life were stressed in the meetings by guest speakers, movies, and round table debates on current issues. In the spring the club sent two representatives to the model General Assembly in Richmond. All members participated in various service projects, such as decorating the school library for Christmas and making tray favors for Fairfax Hospital patients. Encouragement and support in all activities came from faculty sponsor, Miss Billie Johnson.

Throughout the year, the club members enjoyed the satisfaction of participating in and accomplishing many worthwhile projects.

Bubbling with Christmas spirit, the Tri-Hi-Y girls learn how to make Christmas centerpieces.

Foreign restaurants provided festive evenings

During this fast game of German-Spanish soccer, untranslatable shouts were hurled from every direction, along with the ball.

Cries and shouts filled the air as the Spanish Club and the German Club engaged in the soccer game of the year. After this exhausting competition, the score was tallied and found to be zero to zero.

In addition to promoting physical fitness, the Spanish Club members kept themselves well-fed. They dined at El Bodegon, a Spanish-speaking restaurant complete with Spanish-speaking waiters and a Flamenco dancer. Later, the Language Club Dinner also helped to satisfy their healthy appetites.

Club members wished each other and their sponsor, Mr. William Woodrum, "Feliz Navidad" at a Christmas fiesta. A pinata and Spanish wine bottles filled with ginger ale added spice to the party.

Another party, which was held at a member's home, celebrated the final day of school. The year ended with increased understanding of Spanish-speaking countries.

German Club members began their year with a special program to which they invited members of other German clubs from area high schools. Here German enthusiasts heard a lecture by Dr. Gundell of the German Embassy.

There were many opportunities for German Club members to enjoy activities with other clubs. In October they answered the challenge of the Spanish Club to display their skills in soccer. Then followed the Language Club dinner, a delightful chance to become acquainted with the activities and members of Woodson's other language clubs.

Through the efforts of the club's officers and sponsor, Miss Edith Porinsh, a successful Christmas party, and a dinner at the Bavarian Restaurant in Washington D.C. were among recreational activities enjoyed by all. Two other German festivities brightened the club members' days: "Faschingsball", or a masquerade ball; and a "Wandering", or hike. In May an all-American picnic was on the club's agenda.

Students digested cuisine in both Latin

The Latin Club, under the direction of club sponsor Mrs. Elaine Mathers, maintained a constant effort throughout the year to bring a bit of old Rome into the lives of its members. For those who were interested in the Latin tongue and intrigued by the civilization of ancient Rome, the Latin Club provided ample opportunity for developing their interests.

Several Roman social events highlighted the Club's calendar. A gay Saturnalia, corresponding to our Christmas celebration, was held in December. The major fete of the year was the traditional Roman Banquet held in March. Authentic classical foods augmented the ancient atmosphere, and typical Roman entertainment was provided by a fearless troupe of gladiators.

Participation in the Junior Classical League Convention brought the opportunity to share ideas with other clubs.

Under the capable direction of Mrs. Sandra Lyle, Woodson's students interested in learning more about French culture completed a rewarding year. French Club meetings were highlighted by the showing of color slides of France and singing French songs.

One of the club's most interesting activities was an entire evening a la France, when club members dined at a French restaurant and saw a French movie. Collaboration with the other language clubs in giving an International Dinner in November gave members another chance to sample foreign foods.

As part of their service to the school, French Club members sponsored a Mardi Gras Dance. The proceeds from this dance went to buy foreign novels for Woodson's library, continuing reminders of the '65 club's active year.

That eternal appeal of spotlights and grease paint drew this year's Drama Club to new histrionic heights. Club members devoted much time, energy, and enthusiasm to two major productions, the first of which was "Cheaper by the Dozen". This delightful family comedy was presented first for a home audience in December. Two additional performances were given for students from five different area schools. For their second effort of the season, Drama Club members tried a more serious type of play, "Miracle Worker", and proved their versatility by making their serious drama as great a success as their comedy.

A fall and spring induction of the Drama Club's honor society, Thespians, gave recognition to those students who have contributed most to dramatics at Woodson High School. As the final curtain dropped on Drama Club and Thespian activities, the club members were able to look back on a rewarding and gratifying year.

Sharon Hutson, producer, director, and actress, also proved to be a capable painter.

One of the Research Club's first field trips was a visit to Wallops Island Station.

An interest in science and all the career possibilities in scientific fields motivated members of the Research Club. They took several trips to nearby science facilities, including NASA's Wallops Island Station, the National Bureau of Standards, and the Naval Observatory. The club's nocturnal activities focused on the skies when they went on star watches and observed lunar eclipse in December. In all these activities they were assisted and guided by their sponsor, Mrs. Ruth Opp.

Club members were not always concerned with scientific problems; occasionally they studied the techniques involved in the game of chess. When they had reasoned out all the scientific angles of the game, the members of the Research Club challenged the Chess Club to a tournament.

Throughout the year, club members learned more about opening the many doors of science. They looked forward to a new day when they would be more than amateur scientists.

pursue possible careers

For those who were interested in astronomy and geology, joining the Terrestrial Science Club was the beginning of a year of fascinating activities.

Ample opportunity was offered for aspiring astronomers to cultivate their interests: Bi-monthly "star watches" were held at the farm of Mrs. Louise Banks, the club sponsor. Here, December's lunar eclipse was photographed and tabulated.

One of the club's prized possessions was the newly acquired "tumbler". This device, used to polish stones, works on the same principle by which ocean tides polish seashells. Club members enjoyed polishing gem stones—some even made jewelry.

In November the club's attention was focused on geology with a visit to a fault cave near Harper's Ferry, West Virginia.

Other highlights of the year included visits to the United States Geological Survey, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Naval Observatory, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A circuit demonstrator, oscilloscopes, signal generators, and volt meters were the main equipment of Woodson's Electrical Communications Club. With these complex and delicate machines the members of the club and their sponsor Mr. Thomas Bowen studied the intricacies of the electrical theory. In the course of the year, the club put its talents to work installing a radio communications system in the main office. Through this instrument, teachers or members of the administration could relay messages by means of their "Walkie-Talkies".

While the Communications Club was concerned with electricity, the Rocket Club was interested in jet propulsion. Members, under the direction of Mr. Rolfe Chandler, staged miniature rocket launches every other Saturday on Woodson's football field. They also held a candy sale, the proceeds from which went toward purchasing needed equipment.

Clubs explored different fields of science

Completion of the club insignia by Jane Pese and Barbara Harris is supervised by Mrs. Osterman and Kathy Sommerkamp.

Throughout the year, members of the Medical Careers Club took field trips to learn more about the medical field. A trip to the University of Virginia Nursing School gave them a glimpse of the type of training they may need. Two different branches of medicine were observed in trips to the National Orthopedic and Rehabilitation Center in Alexandria and to the Stanton Mental Institution. Other medical careers were also introduced to the club when a veterinarian and a physician came as guest speakers.

An enlightening and enjoyable day was shared by the members of the club and their sponsor, Mrs. Marie Osterman, when they visited the Army Medical Museum in Washington, D.C. They topped the day with lunch at a downtown restaurant. Other pleasant diversions included a Christmas party, a picnic at Great Falls, and a banquet for members and their parents.

Service to the community was also a major goal of this club program. Club members washed windows and put up stickers for the Blood Mobile, collected money for Easter Seals, and volunteered to work twice a month with the children at Junior Village in Washington, D.C. It was an active year, and one which cultivated the club members' interest in a worthy vocation, that of a medical career.

FTA and FHA offered training and experience

Student teacher Brian Cloyed gives some sound advice, "It's around the corner, you can't miss it; it's marked M...E...N."

A very successful year for the Woodson chapter of the Future Teachers of America began with an open house for new members. This was immediately followed by the traditional teachers' tea.

One of F.T.A.'s most interesting programs, continued from last year, was student teaching. Once every month, club members of the Junior and Senior Classes participated in actual classroom situations at Mantua and Wakefield Forest Elementary Schools.

During club meetings, members heard speakers discuss remedial speech, education behind the Iron Curtain, and elementary education. Accompanied by their sponsor Mrs. Dorothy McAteer, FTA members took field trips to the National Education Building and to local colleges.

In order to help a deserving senior attain his professional goal, a financial award was established. Funds for this were raised through bake sales, car washes, and a fashion show.

F.T.A. provided a year of worthwhile activities for those students who look forward to the day when they will be teachers themselves.

Realizing that happy, stable homes do not "just happen," Woodson's would-be homemakers joined efforts to prepare for the homes of tomorrow. Aided by Mrs. Mavis Barber, members of Future Homemakers of America planned programs which included guest speakers from Fairfax Home Economists and Homemakers Association, the Peace Corps, and a local charm school. One program featured a demonstration by Woodson's Cosmetology Department. At another meeting, exchange student Marguerita Valderrama of Chile, and Senor Fernandez, exchange teacher from Spain, described home life in their respective countries.

Holidays offered new opportunities for these family-conscious girls. At Thanksgiving they prepared baskets for nearby nursing homes and a boys detention home. During the Christmas season, they learned how to make decorations such as wreaths, tree ornaments, and table centerpieces. These were then displayed at their Christmas Open House for their mothers and the school faculty.

Their active year ended with the Parent-Daughter Banquet, at which time new officers were installed and degrees were awarded.

D.E. and D.O. Clubs

The Distributive Education Club offered to members of the D.E. classes, an additional opportunity to participate in activities which would further develop their interests in part time employment.

Under the direction of their sponsor, Mr. John Chapman, members planned monthly luncheons at a nearby restaurant. In March members attended the annual Employer-Employee Banquet.

This year the annual D.E. District Contest was held at Woodson. At this time Woodson's D.E. students received special recognition in the fields of display, job interview, and public speaking.

Woodson's Diversified Occupation Club strove this year to promote student participation in educational social, recreational, and vocational activities. Through an active schedule of club projects and programs, each member developed a more complete understanding of the industrial and business world in which he would soon become an employee.

Making speeches and participating in the discussions during the District Convention at W-L High School and the State Convention at Roanoke, Virginia, gave club members the opportunity to acquire desirable leadership ability.

During the year this club was honored with several awards, including second place in both the Open Club Exhibit and Scrapbook Display, in a club conference at Woodson.

Other Club activities included monthly luncheons at a local restaurant, an Employer-Employee Banquet, and a candy sale for the entire school.

chess brought knights to the Cavaliers' realm

One of the newest additions to Woodson's extensive extracurricular program was the Chess Club, which was organized in September of this year. For all those interested in the game of chess, this club was an ideal opportunity for practicing and improving their skills. The Chess Club had eight charter members, but the membership soon swelled to twenty-five potential chess champions.

Competition was the keynote of chess club activities. Throughout the year, members vied for positions on the chess team, which was comprised of six players with the highest ratings. Those who were skilled enough to make up this six-man team found their talents challenged in the spring, when they were invited to Baltimore to compete in the Maryland High School Team Tournament.

Every afternoon of "check" and "checkmate" was a rewarding one for the members of the Club, and the first year of the Chess Club was a highly successful one.

The W. T. Woodson Forum on American History was composed of students interested in expanding their knowledge of the history and government of the United States. This goal they accomplished primarily through field trips to several local historic sites. Before each trip, members gave reports to prepare for a fuller appreciation of the significance of their destination.

The first site visited by the Forum was the scene of one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War—Fredericksburg, Virginia. There the group explored Monroe's law office and the Civil War Museum.

To broaden their knowledge of the government of the United States as well as its history, members of the Forum asked Congressman Wilson to address their group. Mr. Wilson represents Los Angeles County in the 89th Congress. He delivered an enlightening talk on California politics and his functions in Congress.

Further forays to spots of historical interest came in the spring. Accompanied by their advisor, Miss Elsie Story, they visited Gunston Hall, Mount Vernon, Sulley Plantation, and Antietam Battlefield.

from their research

Debating, according to its ancient Greek originators, involves "seeking truths by the study of both sides." Putting this definition into effect, the W. T. Woodson debate team, under the direction of captain Steve Agresta and faculty advisor Mrs. Natalie Rifkin, probed the question of armament. Specifically the 1964-1965 interscholastic debating topic was "Should nuclear weapons be placed under the control of an international organization?"

With this topic in mind, the fifteen members of the debate team challenged various high schools in the area, one each night. Prior to these interscholastic debates, which began early in February and continued through March, the Woodson team gained knowledge in such practical skills as organization of materials, logic in argument, and effective means of presentation. Conferences at George Washington University and the University of Virginia provided helpful hints and information for debaters.

For all artistically inclined students at Woodson, the Art Guild, under the sponsorship of Mrs. Grace Howk, offered a full year of stimulating activities. Its first project was the installation of mounting strips in the art wing hall for displaying students work. This innovation was enjoyed by the entire school as displays of the art students' talents brightened the hallway and added color to everyone's day.

During the Christmas season, Art Guild members painted a beguiling toy show window on the Cafeteria A bulletin board. Another project involved decorating stationery with original designs and selling this handicraft to the student body. To attain professional standards, the Art Guild members worked with a local professional artist, Mrs. Mary Anne Tennant, for several weeks.

In the spring came the culmination of their creative efforts: a concert and art show for which the guild handled the publicity. At this time, ribbons were awarded for the best works in several categories.

The A.F.S. International Club cooperates with American Field Service in sponsoring the exchange student program. This year the A.F.S. scholarship student was Marguerita Valderrama of Santiago, Chile, who became a member of Carol Denny's family in August. She spent a highly rewarding year at Woodson, learning more about the American way of life.

Other club projects were varied. In October, club members, with the help of their sponsor, Mrs. Dorothy McCarthy, collected money for UNICEF's "Trick-or-Treat" program. Later, to accomplish their goal of learning more about the United Nations and its problems, members of the club attended a mock session of the U.N. The International Club also sponsored the U.N. Scholarship Test.

During A.F.S. Week (April 21-27) the club members raised funds for the next year's American Field Service student. Proceeds from the club's sale of A.F.S. Christmas greeting cards were also contributed to this program. Thus each day for this club had a purpose, that of bringing new experiences in international understanding.

Pep, that intangible essence of vitality and vigor so essential to school spirit, was the prized possession of every Pep Club member this year. Members faithfully devoted all their cheerful energy to the promotion of school spirit and sportsmanship.

Working closely with cheerleaders and with their sponsor, Miss Shirley Holton, the Pep Club sought to make the student body aware of all athletic events. Plastering the walls with their own posters, the Pep Club made sure that no one who could read could possibly escape knowing the times and locations of all games.

In the latter half of the year, Pep Club sponsored movies were shown in the school auditorium. Proceeds from this project went toward outfitting a Cavalier mascot for future basketball games.

cheerful energy to promotion of school spirit

With the first home football game of the year came the introduction of the '64-'65 baton-twirling Cavalettes. After this debut, they become a familiar sight to all Woodson supporters.

Leading the marching band on the football field, these Woodson girls helped to dedicate the new football stadium. Other performances included an exhibition with fire batons, a salute to the fathers of the football players on Dad's Night, and a mad-cap performance with the Happy Hooligan Band. The twirling team's showmanship highlighted every half-time of the football season.

Woodson students were not the only admirers of the Cavalettes' talent. In several competitions, the majorettes took top honors. In September, they placed first at a Winchester, Virginia, twirlathon, and in November they came home from the Turkey Bowl with a second-place trophy.

In their endless hours of practice, the Cavalettes were encouraged by their sponsor, Mrs. Jane Numbers. Under the direction of team captain Pat Taylor, many intricate routines for use in exhibitions were perfected. In addition, Cavalette participation in morning and afternoon pep rallies in front of the school gave color and spirit to game days.

Extravaganza '65 brought all the choirs

This year, the Choral Department was bursting at the seams with seven separate choirs: Freshman Mixed Choir, Freshman Girls' Choir, Senior Mixed Choir, Treble Choir, Concert Choir, Concert Ensemble, and Select Girls' Choir. These groups not only improved their vocal skills, but also broadened and intensified their musical knowledge. Two of the choirs, Select Girls' and Concert, took advantage of many opportunities to show their skills and knowledge with many outside performances.

Under the capable direction of Mrs. Jane Numbers, and beginning in February, Miss Carolyn Greer, the choral groups gave many animated performances. These included the Christmas Concert, Extravaganza '65 entitled "Side by Side", and the Easter and Spring Concerts. Woodson's choral department always found appreciative audiences, and the talent the choirs displayed earned well-deserved recognition throughout the area.

Molding ninety-six instruments into a unit of matching melody was a formidable task accomplished by Mr. Everett Buskirk and members of the band.

Throughout the year, entertainment was offered to various audiences. During the football season, the Cavalier Marching Band performed weekly half-time shows; their grand finale was the "Happy Hooligan Band." With the advent of winter, the band moved indoors, transformed itself into the Symphonic Band, and rehearsed for the annual Christmas Concert. Entertainment was also provided at two other major performances, the Extravaganza '65 and the Spring Concert.

Woodson's band participated in concerts with other high schools. Many days were spent in preparation for the District IV Band Festival, and the exchange concert with a band from West Virginia.

The last Symphonic musical selection was "Pomp and Circumstance." This marked not only the senior's graduation but also the end of a melodious band year.

STUDENT LIFE

silence of WTW halls

The halls of Woodson were hushed that early morning of September 2, 1964. Darkness still lingered, just as the summer still lingered. Suddenly the doors burst open and a glimpse of the sunrise could be seen as the first bus load of students arrived, shattering the quiet with their loud talking and laughing. The halls came to life as bus load after bus load of students arrived, bringing with them the promise of new chances and new hopes. Plans and resolutions made during those long, hot weeks of summer were soon to be put to the test and everyone was ready. Everywhere was the eagerness and freshness of the beginning of a day.

Autumn's glory brought with it the color

Football games mean half-time shows. Baton Corps captain Pat Taylor leads her majorettes.

Dave Marsden and Alan Meyers tensely watch the action and wait for the signal to enter the game themselves.

Autumn was a thousand delightful things: a new sweater, a new schedule, new friendships, an outside phys-ed class, and the beginning of football season.

Cheerleaders flashing blue, red, and white outfits brightened the games. Band members marched in half time performances with brisk military strides while the blue-skirted, plumed majorettes twirled their batons. Spectators cheered and clapped in time to the pep band rendition of "Mr. Touch-down." Frozen toes and raspy throats could not dampen spirit, for hot chocolate cups and blankets could always be clutched tighter. Whether the teams won or lost, the fans provided encouragement and support to the players.

After all the helmeted boys had trudged off the field, and fans had deserted the stands, there was nothing left of the excitement except a few scattered bits of confetti and torn "Yea Woodson" signs.

A scene familiar to all Woodson students is the weekly before school pep rally. Cheerleaders, majorettes and pep band alike combine to awaken drowsy students to spirited anticipation of the approaching football game.

Homecoming Dance

Having a rainy night for the football game, so that hair became straightened and clothes messed up, then losing the game on top of all that, might have put a damper on any dance held afterwards. But October 17, 1964 was a very special day for Woodson and the students' spirits never lagged—after two years with no alumni, Woodson was having its first Homecoming!

Appropriately entitled "Autumn Glory", the Homecoming Dance was as vivid as the season. The Senior Class under the direction of Connie Walter and Pam Marchio took advantage of the traditional orange, yellow, and brown to transform the cafeterias into a blaze of fall color. A special center of attraction was the Queen's throne, backed by an enormous multicolored leaf. Pumpkins, cornstalks, scarecrows, wooden kegs full of warm cider, and a pond with live fish added a touch of the rustic. The spirit of fall was authentically captured for this very special dance.

An increased assembly schedule featured fine arts

The lights of the auditorium dimmed, the Select Girls' Choir sang softly, "We Give Thee but Thine Own," as curtains rolled back revealing students of the National Honor Society, ready to conduct their early fall induction ceremony. As the roll call of new members began, tears of joy appeared in the eyes of proud parents and friends alike.

Though usually not so dramatic as this, assemblies throughout the year gave students relief from classroom studies and a chance to experience a variety of informative and cultural programs. Informative assemblies ranged from the special NASA demonstrations of America's space program to the Home Economics Department's exhibition of its year's accomplishments. Awards assemblies gave recognition to outstanding athletes, musicians, and scholars, while class and student body assemblies ranged from business sessions to the challenging Student Government elections assembly.

Special cultural assembly programs began with the impressive interpretation of Thanksgiving through a series of readings and choral selections. Under the sponsorship of the Fine Arts Committee, many other cultural programs, ranging from folk and classical music to the beauty of ballet, enriched the lives of Woodson students.

Winter was the midpoint

Snow and cold and Christmas and the end of the first semester were the essence of winter. The cold weather brought not only ski sweaters, but also research projects, basketball, boots, freezing mornings at the bus stops, and darkness settling in almost before the late buses deposited students in their neighborhoods.

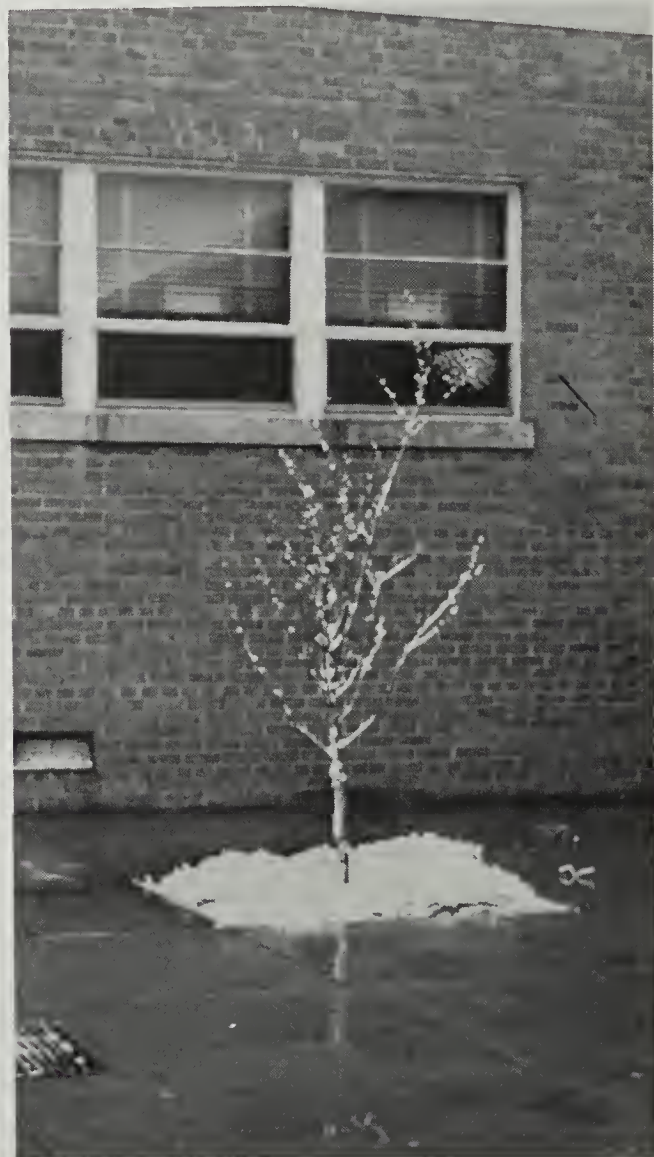

Winter also meant settling into a routine, for the fall period of adjustment was over. Students no longer lost themselves in the labyrinth of Woodson's corridors; by the time winter came, they found their way to classes almost by instinct. They were now so accustomed to their schedules that they knew exactly how long they could linger talking in the halls before making that split-second dash to class.

Winter also brought the Christmas season, and Woodson glowed with beautiful decorations. Then there was the romantic loveliness of the Sweet-heart Dance to highlight the month of February. Other lively pastimes for winter were the many extra-curricular events, especially sports.

Winter marked the midpoint of the year. For seniors it meant the beginning of the "home stretch;" for freshmen it was the end of the frightening newness of the first semester. Winter was a turning point, a time of hard work and increased student activity.

The entrance to room 239 became a street in merrie olde England. Snowflakes were gently floating and drifting as carolers sang by the glow of lantern light. Upstairs there was a showcase of Christmas in a scene of the Nativity.

These hints of the holidays put Woodson into a charitable mood, and the entire student body contributed goods and money to give needy families in the area a happy Yule. Every student felt good inside as big boxes stuffed with food and gifts were being prepared to say "Merry Christmas from W. T. Woodson High."

The Christmas Dance

At 3:30, December 22, frantic seniors suddenly realized that they had four very short hours to prepare for the 1964 Christmas Dance. Working up to the last minute, Karen Armstrong and her decorations committee gave the cafeterias a festive atmosphere. Huge cardboard boxes were painted and arranged along the walls of Cafeteria A to give the effect of two houses; the whole room was a small village on a snowy, wintry evening. The other cafeteria was transformed into a homely living room with a mammoth green Christmas tree and a cheerful fireplace.

Before the night was over, girls in festive semi-formal dresses had been whirled around the dance floor, "Santa Claus" had appeared, and the 1964 Christmas queen, Alice Chalfant, had been crowned by the 1963 queen, JoAnne Coakley. "The Night Before Christmas" created a gay, relaxing, mood for all attending the dance which preceded the anxiously awaited holidays.

The bleachers were closely packed, but the people still poured in. Finally the teams ran onto the court, the crowds cheered, and the teams made a few exhibition shots. Suddenly, two opposing players faced each other and the referee tossed the ball in the air. Cheers arose as the two teams raced down the court toward the basket.

Expressions on the faces in the crowd were mirrors of the game's progress. Frowning foreheads, and worried eyes warned that Woodson lagged behind. Every time the Cavaliers rallied and sank the ball for another precious basket, cheers, claps, and yells from the crowd registered the two points just as accurately as the scoreboard.

Half-time meant a few minutes for everyone to relax and discuss the game while they stretched their cramped legs. When the buzzer sounded, the Cavaliers charged on to victory in the second half. Another game was over, and the crowd felt a happy fatigue from the yelling and excitement of the game. Drama Club repertoire consisted of realistic comedy

A family portrait reveals the liveliness of the Gilbreth tribe, who can't even sit still for the camera.

Cheaper by the Dozen, the Drama Club's winter production, was entirely cast, staged, and directed by students. With the aid of many assistants, Sharon Hutson directed the performance.

Combining comedy and sentimentality, the play reveals the relationship of twelve children to their father, who has definite ideas on how they are to be raised. It is the age of the roaring twenties, and the Gilbreth children (especially the oldest daughter, Anne) resent spending their evenings in assembly halls or listening to language lessons. When Mr. Gilbreth realizes his daughter is growing up, and she learns to appreciate her father's extraordinary talents, the clash between Anne and her father finally ends.

Featuring Mike Gazdo as the father, JoAnn Green as the mother, and Ann Griffith as daughter Anne, the cast found an appreciative first audience in Woodson's student body. Then they went on to delight invitational audiences from local intermediate schools.

A tremendous achievement for the Drama Club was their next production, The Miracle Worker. It is characterized as being realistic drama and requiring a talented and hard working cast. With this in mind, Sharon Hutson as Helen Keller, and Nancy Niland as her teacher Annie Sullivan, worked long hours perfecting touching scenes. As the story progresses, Annie and equally stubborn Helen face continual barriers in their struggle to relate tangible objects to word signs. To ease this melancholy air, the ending brings a miracle to change these girls' lives; Helen understands words and objects, thanks to simple running water covering her hands. Supporting these two girls were Terri Benson, Roy Connell, and Richard Glikes; working together the cast produced a true story, full of emotion.

The Sweetheart Dance

Young romance and medieval splendor was the theme of WTW's Sweetheart Dance. The Junior Class, under the direction of correlating chairman, Shari Heselton, used murals, shields, arches, and pavilions to carry their guests back to the age of chivalry. Country scenes, complete with castles, decorated walls in each cafeteria. Refreshments served under a red and white pavilion gave the effect of a county fair. A silver fountain stood in the center of the cafeteria spouting punch.

The highlight of the dance came at 9:00 when a fanfare sounded and the Junior Class president, Stan Owens, announced the 1965 Sweetheart Queen and court. As each girl's name was called, she paused at the top of an arched bridge and then descended to meet her escort, who walked her to the throne. The last girl to be announced was Sweetheart Queen, Judy Wampler. She reigned from a white throne backed by two large red hearts and multi-colored lights, and danced to the Senior Class theme song "Moon River."

Although players clowned through pre-game stunts, they contended seriously in the game itself. Seniors remained haughtily confident throughout the first three quarters, retaining at least a six-point lead over the juniors. Suddenly, shouts of disbelief escaped seniors as their opponents gained points and surpassed them. Finally in the last two minutes of frantic play, seniors tied the score and rebounded to win in the three-minute overtime, 48-42.

The Concert Band, under the direction of Mr. Buskirk, and the seven choirs, supervised by Miss Greer, worked "Side by Side" to prepare their performance. Also participating was the Cavalette Baton Corps who added extra glamour as they introduced the different numbers.

The choral settings varied from a shipwrecked Treble Choir on a tropical island to a slumber party with the Freshman girls, who received a surprise visit in their dreams from Maurice Chevalier (alias Mr. Buskirk). When the grand finale came, the entire music department united in a medley of song—" . . . We'll be always tied, ever Side by Side . . ."

Outdoor lunches and daffodils bloomed at WTW

Dean Hutchison takes advantage of the warm day to combine business and pleasure.

When spring came to WTW, students fought back a strong desire to let their minds wander from classroom studies. Winter wool was changed for cooler cottons, and balmy weather beckoned restless scholars.

Spring activities included the Washington Redskins-Woodson Faculty basketball game, the Senior Class Annie Get Your Gun, the Drama Club's Miracle Worker, and a "Fine-Arts Weekend" sponsored jointly by the Music and Art Departments. Two Formal dances, the Junior Ring Dance and the Senior Prom, added to the memories of the year. Term papers were finished, college boards taken and senior plans crystalized.

Spring also meant preparation for the 1965 school year. Underclassmen and guidance counselors compiled schedules, Student Government and clubs elected their officers, and the Honor Society held their last yearly induction.

united over 150 seniors

Culminating many weeks of hard work, seniors presented Annie Get Your Gun in late March. As the house lights dimmed and the curtains opened, an elaborate set transported the audience to a mid-nineteenth century Western town where the inhabitants were welcoming Buffalo Bill Cody and his Wild West Show. Through a variety of lively musical numbers and humorous dialogue, the love story of Annie Oakley and Frank Butler unfolded. Frank, played by Steve Kaas, was a Casanova, but, as he informed Annie by singing "The Girl That I Marry," he preferred the dainty type of girl. Sharp Shooter Annie Oakley, portrayed by Nancy Loflin, soon discovered that "You Can't Get a Man With a Gun". Throughout the play, Annie and Frank alternately fought over who was the better marksman ("Anything You Can Do, I Can Do Better"), and finally found a beautiful romance ("Falling In Love Is Wonderful"). With the happy ending, the entire cast enthusiastically agreed that "There's No Business Like Show Business."

Besides entertaining large audiences of fellow classmates, parents, and teachers, the play served as one of the last opportunities for seniors to work together.

Students compare year-end grades.

The photographer seems to have found proof that students aren't the only ones who look forward to leaving school-work behind.

The last days of school were hectic but happy. Students studied for and took final exams, returned the books with which they had lived for nine months, and finally emptied lockers of their accumulated treasures. Teachers averaged grades and had them processed. Suddenly the tension broke and pressures disappeared. With the successes and failures of another school year behind them, students spent their last few hours browsing through their newly arrived CAVALIERS; for a moment, memories were flooded with pictures from the past. But soon the last, long yellow caravan arrived to transport students away from this past. Thoughts turned to beach parties, summer jobs, and freedom from homework.

Cavaliers ended second

"Not good, but not bad," said head varsity football Coach Charles Billak in summing up the Cavalier varsity's second season in Group 1A competition. Woodson's four won—six lost record earned a ninth place in the Northern Virginia standings. The Cavaliers started the season with a disappointing 19-0 loss to Annandale, but bounced back a week later to defeat Edison 14-12. This game was climaxed by quarterback David Strong's 85-yard touchdown run. Opposing Washington and Lee the following week, the Cavaliers played under the new lights of the stadium. The Blue and White began a losing streak with its worst defeat of the season, 30-7. Woodson lost the next two games to Madison and Fairfax, and the homecoming to Marshall. The Cavaliers' desire to win was still strong, however, and they proved it by trouncing Mount Vernon 21-13 on the passing of Strong and the receiving of end Don Celec. Senior Alan Meyers kicked three extra points for the winning Cavaliers.

After winning another close one, Coach Charles Billak ambles back to the locker room, already planning a new play.

... Barbara ...

From the first kickoff of football season to the last basketball game of the year, the varsity cheerleaders, led by captain Connie Walter, rooted the varsity teams to many victories. In their white bulky-knit sweaters, red mittens, and blue skirts, they flashed through the fall. Royal blue skirts and vests with pinstripe blouses became the vogue for winter. Whatever the dress or occasion, they proudly stirred Cavalier spirit with their showmanship and determination.

From the second annual cheerleaders tea, which the girls sponsored in early fall, to the last "basketball" emblem placed on Gabe Oliverio's locker, the song they hummed remained the same:

"Go with our blue and white,
Be loyal, be strong, be right,
And fight on for Cavaliers,
We're with you team, let's go!"

Cavayearlings worked

The junior varsity team started the '64 football season on a high note by defeating Edison 13-0. This was the only win of the season as the Cavayearlings dropped their next seven games.

Participation was the junior varsity's motto. Stressing experience, Coaches Charles Boland and George Litman played the thirty-man roster in every game. Both coaches agreed that the valuable skills gained by their linemen would be an asset to the varsity team next year.

Several of the junior varsity players were moved to the varsity squad at the end of the season—a tribute to them and their coaches. At a football awards assembly, James Sargent, middle linebacker, was cited as the outstanding player.

"Highly successful" was the term Coach Dan Lehman used when describing his '65 freshman football team. Playing a rigid six-game schedule, the junior Cavaliers mustered a 4-2 record, after dropping their first two games to Annandale and Fairfax. Coach Lehman attributed the team's outstanding season to a spirited defense and strong offense.

Realizing that freshman sports provides the young athlete with an opportunity to gain experience, Coach Lehman utilized the entire forty-man roster in five of the six games. At the end of the season, fullback Chuck Thompson was honored as the outstanding freshman football player.

teams' spirit at a peak

Aside from their regular duty of encouraging spirit, the Junior Varsity Cheerleaders sold programs at the varsity games. In spring tryouts, nine girls were selected, and Leslie Issitt was chosen captain of the squad and Lefaye Moore, co-captain. Regularly the girls cheered at Junior Varsity football and basketball games and kept the crowd's and the team's spirit at a peak. Early in the basketball season Leslie moved from the area and Lefaye became captain. At the end of the year, many of the girls competed for positions on next year's varsity squad.

The Freshman Cheerleaders also promoted school spirit and unity. Selected early in the school year, the girls spent many long hours preparing and coordinating new cheers for their Saturday morning football and basketball games. Led by captain Mindy McCaskill, the girls generated unending pep and enthusiasm for their teams.

The second varsity team, which ran as J.V.'s, finished fifth in Northern Virginia. Bryan Cloyd placed eighth in the individual standings. The Woodson harriers competed in seven meets under the direction of Coach Henry Irwin.

Commenting on the season, Mr. Irwin said, "There is no glory in cross country. It takes a particular kind of boy to devote himself to the grind of training and running. These boys were prime examples."

Attired in Confederate uniforms, WTW members participated in Civil War battle reenactments and invitational meets.

Hard work, new skills

With a 4-0 victory over Edison, the W. T. Woodson varsity hockey team began an excellent season. With the experienced coaching of Miss Betty Harrelson and the enthusiasm of the players, they won four out of eight games and tied one.

At the end of the season, several girls were individually recognized for their superior achievement. Trophies were awarded to Sharon McCuddin for sportsmanship and to Susan Russell for best player; Cindy Corso was recognized as high scorer, with a 9-point total.

The junior varsity hockey team, under the coaching of Miss Irma Poarch, also completed an outstanding season compiling a 5-1-2 record. After winning their first two games, tying the third, and winning the fourth, the junior varsity lost to Fairfax by a score of 2-0. They quickly rebounded by winning the next two matches against Groveton and Fort Hunt, and tying the last with Jefferson.

The center forward, Susan Morales, headed the junior varsity scoreboard with a total of four points; Raleigh Shreve was a close second with three points.

With an average of 69.6 points per game, the Cavalier basketball team emerged at the season's end as the highest scoring team in the Northern Virginia 1-A League. Strong defense and aggressive rebounding contributed greatly to the ball club's overall success. Tied near the end of the season with Stuart and Lee, the Cavaliers rolled over their last six opponents and finished sixth out of nineteen teams in the league with an overall record of 13 wins and 6 losses. With this record the team earned a berth in the Northern District Tournament where they suffered a disappointing 70-47 loss to George Washington.

He was honored at the season's end by being placed on the All-Metropolitan and All-District teams. Dave Strong and Dave Marsden also contributed heavily to the offense and, toward the end of the season, both scored several 20-point games. John Martin, Dave Marsden, Don Celec, and Stan Owens contributed to the backboard strength while Dave Oliverio ably led the defense. With a record of eight wins and ten losses the Junior Varsity basketball team closed out their third season. Despite a rough schedule, the team provided many exciting moments for the fans before the varsity action. This was especially evident in the Hammond game where the Cavayearlings handed the Admirals their only defeat of the season. Another high point of the season was the 34-27 victory over Washington-Lee. Coach Bob Smith credited the boys with "hard work and determination," which led to their eight wins.

Tony Barile and freshman Chuck Hoffman contributed greatly to the offensive lineup that scored an average of over 35 points per game, which is very commendable for a Junior Varsity team. Hap Hodges and Chris Zier were invaluable in pulling in those crucial rebounds. As evidenced in game after game, the boys played as a powerful team unit.

The Junior Varsity achieved a record which vied with that of the varsity. The Jayvees were led offensively by Inez Jukes with a total of sixty-four points and by Sheila White with a total of sixty-one points. Ellen Baeshore and Sue Schaible headed the defense which held the opponents to a total of thirteen points per game. Team skill, combined with the excellent coaching of Miss Whitehead, compiled an impressive record of ten wins and two losses.

Anxiously awaiting the sound of the starter's gun, Steve Morgan stands tense and alert.

From their beginning organization in November until the end of the season in March, approximately fifty Cavaliers regularly enjoyed the challenge and the competition of swimming. The group's first objective was to raise $600 to rent Starlit Pool one hour each week for practice. Their second goal was to advance swimming to the status of a varsity sport at Woodson. With both objectives realized, the team had its accomplishments recognized in the winter athletic awards assembly for the first time in Woodson's history.

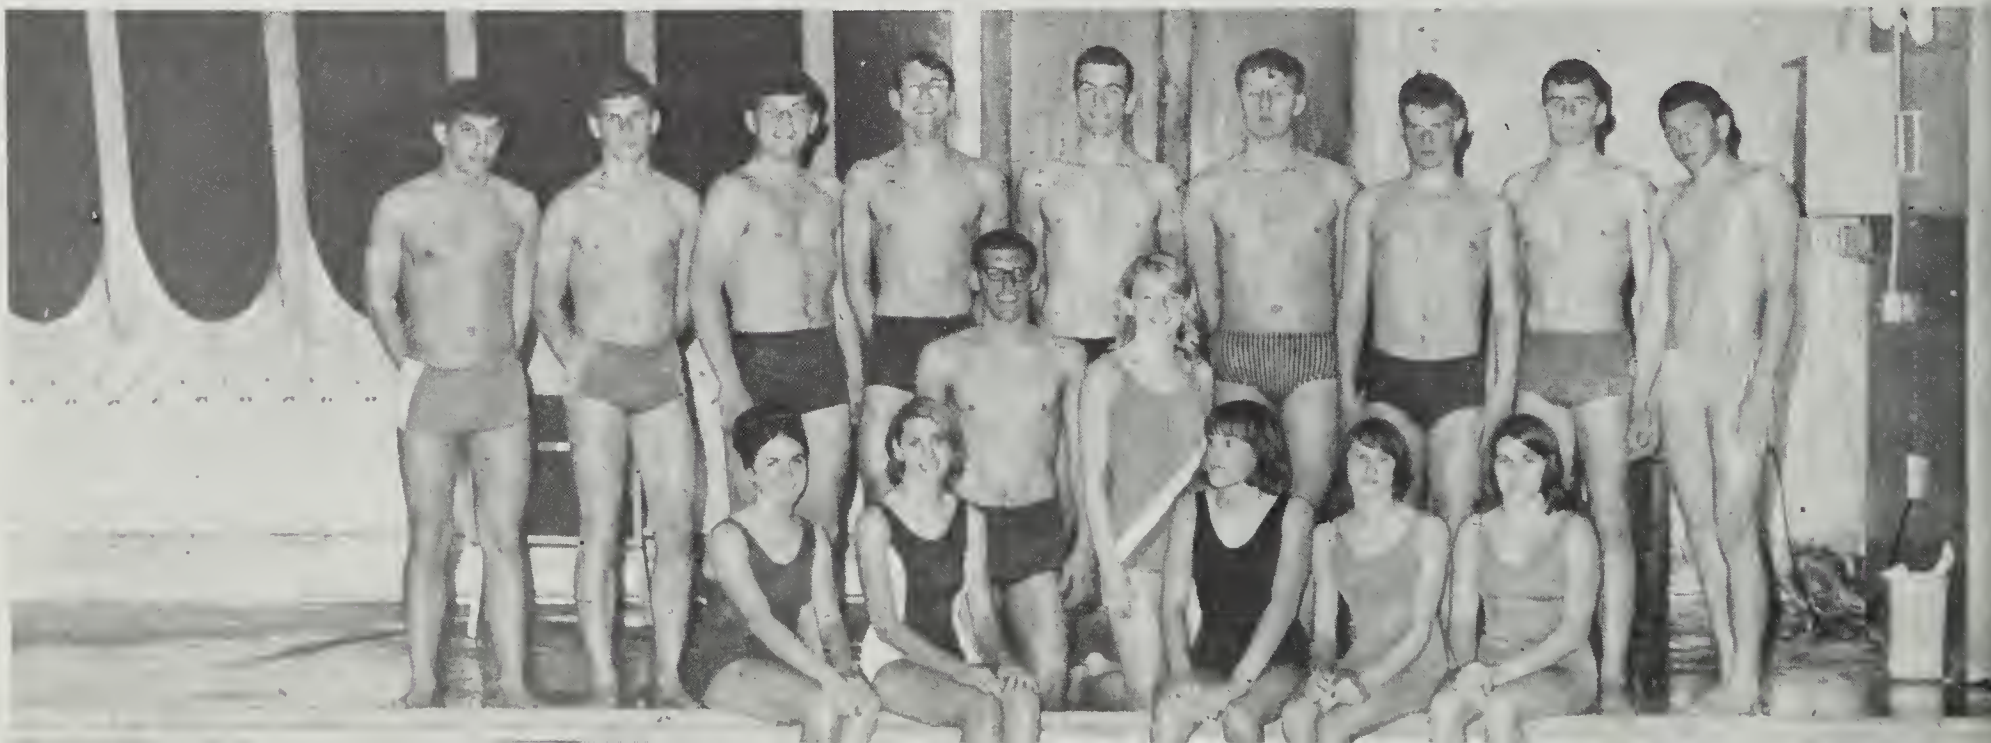

Under the expert volunteer coaching of Mrs. Helen Thomas and the leadership of co-captains Paul Bruening and Sharon Harler and faculty sponsor Mr. Rolfe Chandler, WTW swimmers routed four teams in succession: Fairfax 95-41; McLean 101-35; Stuart 98-38; and Annandale 94-42. In their last meet of the season, undefeated Cavaliers fell to Marshall by a score of 70-66.

Rifle team captured Northern Va. championship

In its third year of existence, the Varsity Rifle Team became the first Woodson team to win a Northern Virginia championship. The ambitious '64-'65 marksmen scheduled twelve matches and won ten of them. One of their proudest achievements was an upset victory over Washington-Lee, Northern Virginia champions for the past three years.

Each match involves five individual riflemen shooting .22 caliber rifles at small targets, fifty feet away. The shooter fires ten shots from each of three positions, kneeling, prone, and offhand. Targets have five bull's-eyes, each one worth twenty points.

With Mr. James Humphrey and Mr. Henry Irwin serving as coaches for the third year in succession, the team chose Steve Hudock and Mark Slichter as co-captains for the '64-'65 season. The over-all team strength was supplemented by the accomplishments of Eric Schultz, the team's chief marksman who won the individual Northern Virginia small-bore championship.

Hitting a long two iron to the green from a distant ruff or using a sand wedge to gently but firmly stroke the ball to make it sit down on a fast green were but two of the many situations members of the 1965 golf team encountered.

Returning members Wes Jeffries (captain), Bill Spell, and Don Sheads, led their fellow teammates to a strong season. Coach Dennis Houlihan termed the season as "a year in which new team members were able to gain valuable tournament experience."

Woodson's Varsity golf team was composed of 14 members. Every Tuesday a practice session was held at the Army-Navy Country Club of Fairfax. The eight top scorers, six regulars and two alternates, then represented WTW against other high school teams. The young golfers met Osborn, Madison, Quantico, Falls Church, Fairfax, and McLean in six close league tournaments.

Varsity golfer Bill Spell follows through on a long iron shot during a practice session.

The Cavalier Varsity Tennis Team completed its first full week of practice and tryouts in late March with twenty boys competing for the top six positions on the singles ladder. Coach Jenkins, in his second year as tennis mentor, welcomed back four of last year's starters and several promising transfer students.

Leading the list of returning players was Ed Gallup, a junior who played in the number one position last year. Also returning were sophomores Roger Duncan and John Lowrey, who played in the number three and four positions respectively. Scot Marston, number six player a year ago, rounded out the veteran list. Two newcomers who added strength to the team were Juniors Greg Cowart and Richard Glikes. The boys who emerged as the top singles players also competed in the doubles matches.

Varsity played hustling brand of baseball in '65

Ralph Blevins eyes a fast ball with the hope of a solid hit.

A powerful nucleus of veterans answered the initial call for candidates as Woodson Cavaliers began their third year of varsity baseball. Six let-termers as well as four reserves from the '64 squad returned to carry the load as the Cavaliers entered competition in the tough Northern Division of the Group 1A District.

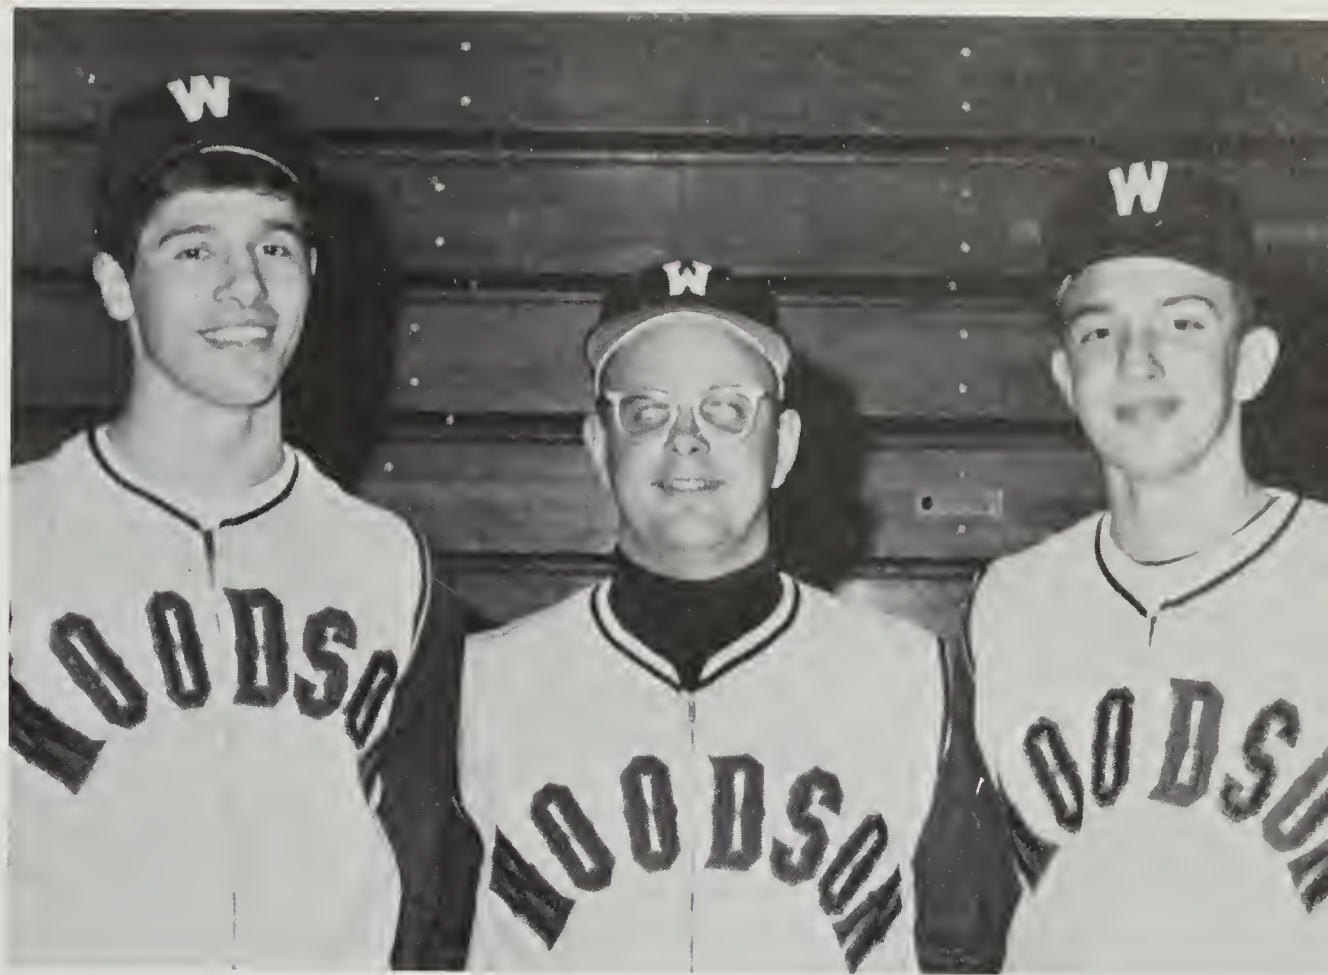

Returning hurlers Jeff Willison, Jeff Harper, and Frank John contributed pitching strength. They were joined by Tim Moore, Stan Owens and Tom Bond, providing a formidable mound staff. The catching chores were assigned to Alan Meyers, a senior with long-ball power.

The double play combination of Rick Starr and Dan Mastic coupled with the defensive agility of Pat Crowley and Ron Maley gave the varsity squad a tight infield.

The unglamorous side of varsity baseball consists of hard three or four-hour practices five days a week.

Co-captain Gabe Oliverio led defensive strategy in the outfield as centerfielder. Bobby Clark, who saw spot duty at first base in the '64 season, moved over to the rightfield position. Leftfield was shared by three alert ballplayers, senior Doug Rowell, junior Ralph Blevins, and sophomore Ron Millner.

In a pre-season interview, Coach Lehman expressed hopes of an outstanding season. "We're going into all of the games with the attitude that we can win them, and we have as good a shot as anybody."

Cavalier trackmen set Fairfax records

Despite bad weather at the season's beginning, the track team practiced and progressed rapidly. After leading the boys through a vigorous training schedule, Coaches Bernie Thompson and Bob Smith stated that the team's strength lay in the sprint and distance medley relay, distance running, and hurdles.

In late March, Woodson participated in its first meet at Marshall. In this Fairfax County Relay the Cavaliers, rated as underdogs, gained an upset victory over Marshall with a 57-56 score. For the first time in five years, Annandale was toppled from high position into third place with a score of 46 points. At this victorious meet, the Cavaliers set new Fairfax County records in the distance and sprint medley relays.

Marshall softball teams

In March ninety girls tried for positions on the softball teams. After three "cuts," the original turnout was reduced and organized into a varsity team and a JV team. Miss Irma Poarch coached the varsity thirteen who had the added strength of four returning lettermen. The eighteen JV girls progressed under the coaching of Miss Betty Harrelson. From April 6 to May 13, the teams competed against Fort Hunt, Jeb Stuart, Madison, Lee, McLean, Marshall, Edison, and Annandale. Both the JV and varsity teams agreed that Marshall was the toughest opponent in the 1965 season.

Increased participation

Woodson's intramural program for boys was greatly expanded in 1964-65 to include wrestling, gymnastics, and softball, in addition to basketball. Early in the basketball season Mr. John Oliverio, head of Woodson's intramural program, and Mr. Pat Cunningham, Athletic Director, set up a basketball and wrestling program for the boys two days a week after school. Basketball teams were divided into two divisions, one for freshmen and sophomores, and another for juniors and seniors. In the wrestling intramural contests, boys were evenly matched according to weight.

For gymnastic intramurals, Woodson's facilities in the Corrective Gym were put to much more extensive use when the Athletic Department employed a special instructor to coach interested students one night each week.

was encouraged by expanded intramural program

Soccer, bowling, basketball, tennis, modern dance, track and field, and volleyball constituted Woodson's active intramural program for girls. Of these sports, basketball and volleyball were the most popular, for together they attracted 300 of the 500 intramural participants. By arousing enthusiastic student participation, the program provided competition for those girls who lacked varsity ambition or skill but wished to play for fun and experience.

An innovation this year was the Intramural Council. Led by Miss Shirley Polinger, Miss Carolyn Legard, and president Westi DeHaven, the council helped interested students plan activities for county-wide sports days. Thus, intramurals supplemented skills learned in physical education classes, and offered students fun and friendly competition.

Freshmen

Through the portals of Woodson High School walked the uncertain, yet eager, freshman class of 1968. The halls were filled with strange faces, and the classrooms were big and unfamiliar. The members of the class themselves were new to each other, having merged from a variety of intermediate schools, primarily Lanier, Whittier, and Poe. The bewilderment soon passed as each individual earned a definite place in the student body.

Under the leadership of their hardworking officers, Mark Sharp, president; Adrienne Darr, vice-president; Emily Pennington, secretary; Dave Sur-nock, treasurer; Tom Bates and Bruce Graham, senators, and their advisor, Mr. Oliverio, a constructive beginning was made toward their goal of achieving a united and active class. They participated not only in academics, but also in sports and in class activities. In November they had a special assembly in which a seven-year-old child prodigy played selections of classical music. In February there was a Hershey Bar Sale.

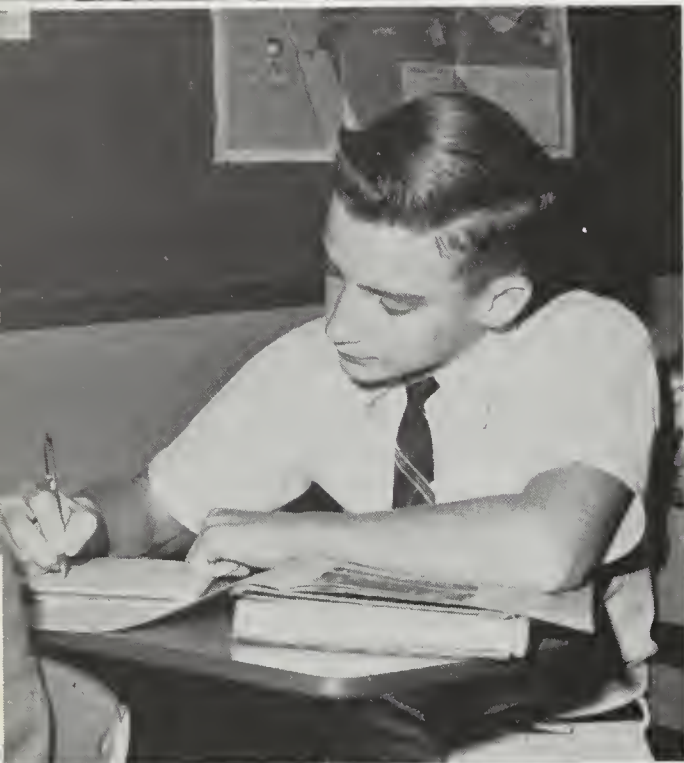

Mr. John Oliverio, Freshman Class Sponsor.

Through various class activities, Woodson's first-year students became an integral part of the student body. Wherever they ventured, they carried with them the enthusiasm and determination that proved a winning combination. In a few short months they have changed the strangeness into familiarity, and the obstacles into stepping stones.

I dreamed I was in a giant cube with square roots coming at me in every direction. Then, I pretended I was Mr. Pierce and fought them off with postulates and theorems. Bruce Graham.

Sophomores

In addition to his duties as a math teacher, Mr. Pierce served as Sophomore Class advisor.

The Sophomore class swung into "high gear" with an active calendar for 1965. After ratifying their constitution, they planned a bake sale to raise funds for two class dances. Both of the hops required determination and patience as well as diligent planning on the part of class members. While "Dancin' in the Street" under red and green traffic lights and street signs in Cafeteria A, the sophomores heard shrill sirens and clanging bells. This false alarm did not dampen the spirit of the evening; the dance was continued! The second sophomore dance also required patience, for it was postponed twice because of snow.

Finally in February amid a summer amusement park setting, sophomores discarded heavy winter coats and boots to dance to surfing songs by the Paramounts. Palm trees provided just enough shade for "Sophomores Under the Sun".

With enthusiasm for class projects, sophomores realized their class goal of unity. Under the leadership of their officers, Gordon Ruef, president; Mike McCudden, vice-president; Anita Guerin, secretary; Kelly Pace, treasurer; Marcie Mock and Susan Morales, senators, along with their sponsor Mr. Pierce, the class set a pace which will be a challenge for future second-year Cavaliers to match.

Juniors

JUNIOR OFFICERS. Mary Regan, Treasurer; Sheila McDonald, Senator; Chris Miller, Secretary; Stan Owens, President; Nancy Graham, Senator; Dianne Waters, Vice-President.

Organization, hard work, and eagerness led the juniors to great heights this year. The proud Junior Class did not forget that they would be the first four year Woodson graduation class.

Their officers, Stan Owens, president; Diane Waters, vice-president; Chris Miller, secretary; Mary Regan, treasurer; Sheila McDonald and Nancy Graham, senators, and sponsor Mrs. Miller, gave the class the impetus to achieve the highest goals. The Sadie Hawkins Dance, Junior Class Play, Sweetheart Dance, Junior-Senior Basketball Game, Junior Jollies, and Climatic Ring Dance high-lighted the special activities of the year. The class also had a work-day and donated the $250.00 profit to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library.

Together they faced the trial run P.S.A.T. test on a Saturday in late October. However, all too soon May arrived bringing with it the decisive S.A.T. and achievement tests. The morning examination involved sections on English vocabulary and applied math and afternoon tests covered such subjects as Chemistry, Latin, American History and English Composition.

Finally the long awaited day arrived. On May 7 the rings were received—a proud moment for a proud class. They had achieved what every class strives for, and had fulfilled a year that would be hard to equal.

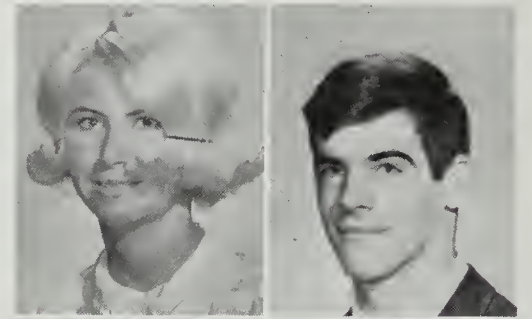

Junior Class sponsor, Mrs. Miller, gently persuades a reluctant Mr. Miller to help distribute programs early in the evening of Woodson's Sweetheart Dance.

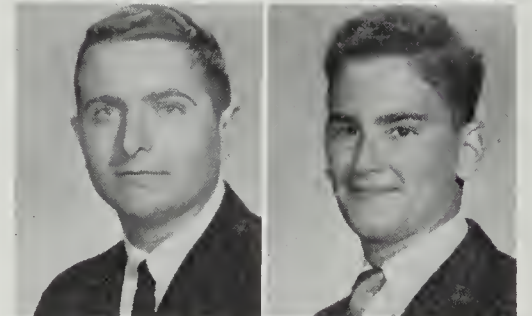

"Don't ask me, I only work here," says Dianne Waters at the popside sale sponsored by the Junior Class.

Seniors

The senior year is traditionally regarded by aspiring underclassmen as the exciting and dramatic finale to high school. The word "senior" has come to symbolize increased freedom, privileges, and newly acquired maturity—in short, a thrilling life.

With the advent of September, last year's juniors were forced happily, though hesitantly, into their new role as seniors. Seniors themselves recognized this startling transformation to a greater degree when they turned their thoughts to class pictures, college boards, graduation announcements, and class ranks. Being a senior, of course, was not all magic and glamour; there were still the day-to-day assignments, examinations, term papers, and required reading.

Mr. Lehman, sponsor of the Class of '65, puzzles over a problem encountered during a Senior Council meeting.

SENIOR COUNCIL. Seated: Cheryl Vetter, Gail Camp, Deleice Fulcher, Ronnalee Christie, Linda Buzhardt, Barbara Harrington, Valerie Ehcwald, Luan Hart, Edna McCann, Marie Towe, Karen Armstrong, Susan Keeth, Kathy Scott. Standing: Steve Wilson, Tom Allen, Pat Davis, Nola Master-son, Pam Wrenn, Cynthia Spillers, Steve McLane, Bob Thompson, Rich Downs, Ann Mallon.

Standards were set by the Senior Council and officers

Even before school opened, senior officers and the Activities Committee began work on an ambitious schedule of class projects for the coming year. Only a week after school began the class presented a highly successful Back-to-School Dance for the entire student body. The Class of '65 also sponsored W. T. Woodson's first homecoming dance, "Autumn Glory", the December semi-formal "The Night Before Christmas", and the play "Annie Get Your Gun!" The final and most meaningful event was the Senior Prom, which took place in May.

While seniors busied themselves memorizing lines from Macbeth, reading The Mayor of Casterbridge, and waiting for college acceptances, many new traditions were established through the Senior Council. The "Senior-of-the-Week" exhibit featured outstanding class members for recognition by the student body. Class cards were issued, Senior intramurals begun, Senior tables set up, and Wednesdays set aside as Senior-Dress-Up Days.

As semester grades were averaged and college acceptances began arriving, Seniors worried over final exams and caps and gowns. And in June, as the largest graduating class in the history of Fairfax County marched down the field to receive their diplomas, each individual was seized by the thrilling, saddening, and frightening realization that his day at Woodson was over. But the Senior year is more than an end to high school days; it is a realization of academic achievements, true friendships, and individual standards established during four years of preparation for adult life. Seniors knew that as their day in high school closed, tomorrow would bring a new, more exciting and more demanding world. And with gratitude to their teachers, their counselors, and their alma mater, they turned to face a new day.

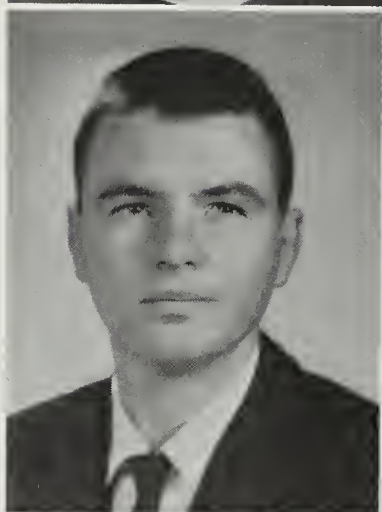

With cheers, signs, and laughter, members of the Class of '65 display spirit at the first pep rally of the year.

And To-Morrow is only a vision;
But To-Day, well lived,
Makes every Yesterday
A dream of Happiness,
And every To-Morrow a Vision of Hope.”
